A MILESTONE

When I look back on past years
And see a heart that's free,
I find myself encouraged
For what's ahead of me.

Though now I've reached the summit And laugh at by-gone fears,
Close to my heart they'll always
Be cherished through the years.
Nadine Lee.

Good order is the foundation of all good things.

OF

Did They Really Live Happily Ever Atter?

The Couple in the Castle—After a few years of bluss and the third baby is born, the little woman starts nagging that you'll simply have to add another room because baby can't sleep with junior, the way he cries at night, and she's so tired of the solitude, never gets to play bridge or have her hair fixed any more—why don't you take an apartment in town so you can get around a little and have something to read besides the Rears and Robust catalog.

Jim—Jim always was a heel, never bringing her pretty flowers or anything, and after they're married he merely becomes a worse bum, refusing to work and frequenting pool halls and such. Result is if she doesn't wanta take in washing in order to eat, the whole thing ends up in the divorce court.

He's IA in the Army and Al in My Heart—Makes no difference what he is in her heart, he's on KP duty now, far, far away, and she's hunting for a guy with a deferment.

With the Wind and the Rain in Her Hair—That's easy, because unless she has hair like Ann Shaw's it isn't long before it resembles a worn-out mop, her sun-tan powder is streaked, and, after wiping the mascara out of her eyes, she sees him disappearing over the hill.

Woodchoppers Ball—Maybe he did a hopping contest at Roosevelt, but after they've been married ten years and that's still the only step the guy knows, his wife is relieved to have someone cut in, and the young girls groan when they see him coming. "The old goat," they say, "doesn't he know that hopping went out with the class of '42?"

Laverne Sedrel: "Sometimes you seem so manly and at other times absurdly effeminate. Why is it?"

Dick Sherman: "You see, half of my ancestors were men and the other half women."

Doctor to his patient: "Say, Mr. Jones, I don't like to mention this, but that check you gave me last week came back."

Patient: "Well, that makes us even. So did my rheumatism."

When Bob Peterson was in the Ozarks, he told a yokel that he had his right shoe on his left foot. The yokel replied, "My gosh, I been wearin" 'em that way for twenty years and thought I was club-looted."

ROOSEVELT 7, NORTH 6

Our football team was losing
Upon the muddy field;
Then our team found its bearings.
The opponents began to yield.

Burns was playing half-back.
Big John plugged up the line:
No sooner did the half begin
Than Burns began to grind.

He turned and twisted to the goal,
The fans stood on their feet:
Then Warner kicked the extra point
That called for North's defeat.

SIGNS OF THE TIMES

In a loop restaurant: "Eat Here Before We Both Starve."—Swiped.

Lightning struck three men who were sitting in front of the general store yesterday. One of them was knocked senseless, while the other two exclaimed, "Leggo! I'm coming right home."—Stolen.

Boss, pointing to cigaret butt on floor:
"Dick, is that yours?"
Dick Means, graciously: "Not at all, sir.

You saw it first."

Ode to Mr. Munger and Mr. Hasty
Riding o'er the countryside
Come two riders side by side.
Riding high on crimson steeds
They come at many different speeds.
After sunset as the world grows dark,
They peddle home in stark
Terror of another day of peddlin'.

Mutt Daley says bridge players are one class of people who learn to take it on the shin.

Saint Peter (hearing knock at gates):
"Who's there?"

Voice: "It is I."

Saint Peter: "Go away! We don't want any more school teachers."

Have you heard the one about the absent-minded professor who lit a match to see if he had turned off the lights?

Mrs. Risser "Tom, is the word pants singular or plural?"

- R ---

Tom Murray: "Well, it'd be singular at the top and plural at the bottom."

MID-SEMESTER NIGHT'S DREAM

OT

Nighty-Nightmare

Last night I have a dream. This dream seems strange mainly because it seems so true to life. Just as I reach 3,416,285 in my sheep counting, I have a flashback to my dear high school days.

I see Mr. Hutchins jitterbugging with Miss Meers, who is lustily chewing gum. Dick Ryden comes in blowing up a medicine ball, when Bob Hufford, pajama-clad youth, gently seats him on the floor with a flying tackle. Two bloodhounds enter followed by Barb Cash, who is looking for Joe Dudley. Joe is hanging by his knees from the back bumper of a passing hoarse, driven by Dick Means and occupied by the Art Club. Timmy Dunn and Clare Kessel waltz by an a floating ice cake. Harlan Wittenstein, equipped with roller skates, is pinning Bill Spencer for the fifth time in four minutes, as James and Paul Conrad apply "hot-foots" to Bill's left and right feet, respectively. Neil Adamson is playing marbles with Dick Sherman and Jack Curtis when La Verne Sedrel, on motor equipped cello, sooms by. Curtis and Adamson continue the game. Mr. Hasty's riot squad, composed of Chloris Leachman, Millie Hoak, Phyliss Thompson. and Mary Beth (Toughte) Pilmer, grabs the marbles and carries the two players to the office. Ed Knorr, driving his milk wagon, finishes his route, with Jerry Stone and Bob Young throwing milk bottles off the back of the wagon at passing ants. I see Mrs. Maynard and the quiz kids, Bill Boylan, Paul Weaver, and Dick Mannheimer, drifting by on the after deck of a rowboat, Mrs. Maynard asks the $64 question, which is: Solve the quadratic 2x 37xy-12 seniors. Boylan is just answering when I wake up. It seems that the windows are all open and icicles are hanging from the ceiling. What is more. there are no covers on my bed and my straight-jacket has come unfastened.

EASY LESSONS ON HOW TO TYPE or "No Brush, No Lather, No Rub-in, No Drip, No Harmful Abrasives, No Carton, No Boxtops, No Nothing—Just Blood."

Assuming that you know what a typewriter is, and the correct method of addressing one as "Typy dear, you're not my type", we will now give youse a few ways to keep a typewriter happy. As you know, many typewriters spell wrong, so buy them a Little Gem dictionary (which by a strange coincidence, we sell). Perhaps your typewriter is the prankster type. If so, the first time that you catch him skipping or blurring or un-capitalizing the capitalized letters, or any of those little typewriter tricks, thrash him soundly with a hearty blow on the tabulator key, which is equivalent to the human solar plexus. We are now ready for the first lesson.

Lesson One: The Approach.

The typewriter, being a wary fellow, must be approached furtively and with much stealth. One must lower one's voice when in the same room with a typewriter, as a typewriter detests undue noise. After approaching the machine, one lowers oneself into the chair and is ready for business. The cover must be jerked off unexpectedly or the typewriter will fight back. We are now ready for lesson two.

Lesson Two: Finding the Home Row. (Or, Don't you know either?)

As you doubtless already know the typewriter consists of many little keys and symbols, which look like a lot of Greek fraternity pins.

Now the paper must be dropped into the intake slot which is marked by a wee sign, "Intake Slot". One caution: One must not put the paper in katty-korner, as your writing will seem a bit off-center. Now place the paws firmly on the home row, which is thus: (Reading from left to right), asdfahjkl; c. which means "asdfah jkl;¢", you ignoramus. To learn the home row thoroughly, one must own the book "The Snorf Preparatory Method", which may be secured from us for a nominal sum, as we wrote it. Now we are ready for several elementary exercises. They are as follows: dbdbdbdbdbd whoa. Comes now, lesson three.

Lesson Three-The Blindfold Test.

Tie a black cloth about your eyes and seat yourself gently at the typewriter. From a vertical position, (quit that peeking) lower your arms in front of youse, start typing so that you will be ready for lesson four.

Lesson Four-The doo-dads (Gadgets).

You will notice on each end of the rolling pin, (please memorize), two black wheels, circular in shape. As yet, we have not found what these little fellows are for. If you find out before we do, send your answer to Smedlestonch, Gridely, and Van Jones, Ink.

Now notice the little lever on the left, quant isn't it? This lever pushes a little thing-a-ma-bob which rotates and hits a doo-hickey which in turn pushes a little mallet, or something, and makes the rolling pin go around one space and kicks the paper up one graduation.

Lesson Five-Climax.

Enroll in some type of typing class. Now you are ready for the kill—drag your teacher off in a corner and whisper to her, making sure the entire class can hear you, "Teacher, I have completed the Smedlestonch, Gridley, and Van Jones, Ink., five lesson correspondence typing course. Aren't you glad, hmmmm?"

Now for a swell, free trip to the Happy Hunting Grounds. Deadly, ain't it?

-Huff-Sherm-Les

"Wine, women and song.

Have done many a man wrong."

So Dave Lambert's going to give up singing.

Ronnie Thompson: "Hey Jayne, what do you think will go well with my pink and red socks?"

Jayne Bohannon: "Hip boots."

— a —

Breathes there a man with soul so dead, Who never has turned his head and said, 'Hmmm, not bad."

Arch Madden: "Is it possible for you to dig me up a girl for tonight?"

Dick Ryden: "Sure, but why not take a live one?"

General: "Quite an explosion out at the ammunition plant this morning, but I hear that Major Puffle is quite collected."

Colonel: "Yes, it was pretty bad, but Major Puffle is still being collected, however."

Best joke for a long time: Barb Cash typing.

THE WORM TURNS

By Norma Jean Horrigan

Virtue is its own reward—
I well believe that's true!
For though I tried so very hard.
With virtue I am through!

I wore little make-up on my face.
I left my hair in its natural state.
And deemed that flirting was out of place.
Now look at my sorry fate!

My teachers hold me quite a star.

My grades are all A-1.

They say that surely I'll get far:

Maybel But I don't have fun.

Henceforth my studies may well rest
On laurels of past glory.
And my teachers join the blest,
For my future's a different story.

I'll adorn myself with powder and paint,
I'll stay up late and "gad" about;
I won't say isn't if I want to say "ain't,"
Oh joy! Now that school's out!

BUTCHER'S BEEF

Then there is the one about the butcherman's daughter. He couldn't get up the nerve to MEAT her. But don't VEAL too sorry for him. He would have got sick listening to her continually LOIN to him. The poor CHOP never did get to know her. That was a big mis-STEAK, You are crazy if you believe all this BALONEY I've been feeding you.

Jackie Riggles was acting very naughty one day, and when his mother attempted to punish him, he crawled under a bed, safely out of her reach.

When his father came home, Mrs. Riggles told him how bad Jackie had been and said he should drag the boy out from beneath the bed. Jack, seeing his father crawling toward him, said, "Whatsa matter, pop? She after you, too?"

Bill Sullivan: "A good deal depends on the formation of early habits."

R

Don Perkins: "I know it. When I was a baby, my mother paid a woman to wheel me around and I've been pushed for money ever since."

Senior: "Why is an empty purse always the same?"

- R --

Freshman: "I dunno, why?"

Senior: "Because you can't see any change in it."

THE DRAMA OF RAIN

Ping-pang . . . ping-ping . . . the never-ceasing rain spanked the tin roof monotonously.

"I can't stand it!" she sobbed, "at night it rains, in the morning it rains, in the afternoon it rains... nothing but rain! Oh how I hate it, this never-ceasing, monotonous rain.

She slipped from her chair to the floor and lay in a sobbing, quivering heap.

Her voice rose in a shrill monotone, "Ever since we arrived here six months ago, I've hated this place, hated it, do you hear? I hate the rain, I hate you, I ... " (Her voice broke off in a stifled shriek) ..., her tone sank to a dull, low wail, "It's this rain, this horrible, ghastly rain"

Finally the man, breaking his self-imposed silence, spoke.

"Shore is wet out," he said.

-Les Brooks

Private: "Sir, the enemy are as thick as peas."

General: "Then shell them."

General: I ned shell men.

WHAT'S WHAT WITH A KUMQUAT?

Hmmmmmmmm?
Ode to a Size 32 Kumquat
O little kumquat, on the wall—

You're not short—but you ain't tall!
Do you think you're Julius Caesar?
Or, by chance, Scrooge, Ebeneezer?
Say, who are you, you little runt?
Are you (could be) Alfred Lunt? Hmmm?

Hmmmmmm-ummmm! (meaining no)

Hardly a kumquat is now alive
That ain't equipped with overdrive.
Do you think a kumquat's weary
Just because his life is dreary? Hmmm?
No, you goon, you're simply wrong!
Kumquats delight in kicking the gong!

Moral: Be nice to web-footed, purple striped kumquats—they may be your uncle on a toot. Or don't you?

Neil Adamson: "Mother, please fix me some sandwiches. Our side lost in the spelling contest, and we have to give the winners a picnic."

Mrs. Adamson: "You should have been on the winning side,"

Neil: "But you see, mother, when I chose our team I thought I was picking a football team."

Dick Shrieber: "What caused that big explosion at your house?"

Ray Eastman: "Powder on my coat."

DIRGE

I guess I'm doomed,
My life is through—
My tale of woe,
I'll tell to you

One week ago
She turned me down,
The only girl
I know in town.

It's not my fault!

I make the motion
To blame those guys
Across the ocean.

She had no reason,
I haven't been bad;
But just the same,
She's really mad

There's only one reason

For this pickle,

It's 'cause I called for her

On my bicycle.

If a man removes his hat in an elevator, it means that he has: 1—good manners, 2—hair.

RELIEVING THE CONSCIENCE

A man after buying a ticket to a show walked off without picking up his change. The customer next in line asked the cashier what she did in a case like that.

'I rap on the window with a sponge," she replied.

Ed Engstrom says: "The trouble with my golf game is that I am standing too close to the ball—after I hit it."

If little Red Riding Hood lived today
The modern girl would scern her;
She only had to meet one wolf,
Not one at every corner!

Stolen

Dick Means: "What's the difference between a Scotchman and a canoe?" Elaine Young: "I don't know." Dick: "A canoe tips."

And then there was the one about the Scotsman who bought only one spur. He tigured that if one side of the horse went, the other was sure to follow

WHAT MAKES A QUEEN

I saw a girl the other day.

Man, she was a queen.

She had a luscious, even tan

And eyes of flashy green.

Her tan, of course, was just a fake
From powder she had bought;
Mascara made her eyes look green Twas a trick she had been taught.

Her hair was a silken, flaming red.

Not a wig—a dye.

Her nails were long (from the 5 and 10).

It's funny what money can buy.

Her lips were red—lipstick, the source,
Her teeth were pearls, I'm told
She got them at "dollar store"
She traded—new for old.

But, though her beauty was all bought.
You can tell, just look
Her personality is the real, true stuff.
(She read it in a book.)

He thought he'd surely made a hit,
When for his photograph she prayed.
"Out when this calls," she wrote on it.
And gave it to the maid.

The man who minces his words usually talks a lot of baloney.

TRAVELER

They were hidden, sitting in the swing in the moonlight alone. No word broke the stillness for half an hour until—

"Suppose you had money," she said,
"What would you do?"

He drew out his chest in all the glory of young manhood. "I'd travel!"

He felt her warm, young hand slide into his. When he looked up she was gone. In his hand was a nickel!

I've never been dated
And I've never been kissed;
They said if I waited,
No man could resist
The lure of a pure and innocent miss.
The trouble with this —
I'm lifty.

Marian Kirk: "You know, when I'm down in the dumps I just get myself a new hat."

Sue Blakely: "I've always wondered where you got them."

Alan Dungan: "Why should a radio announcer have small hands?"

Bonnie McBroom: "I don't know. Why?"
Alan: "We pause for station identification."

THE 1942 ROUNDUP

ANOTHER

And there's the one about the Norwegian who kept mumbling, "I'd rather work for a thousand Germans than one Englishman," Word spreads in these occupied countries and soon a Nazi official overheard him and complimented him warmly.

"That's the spirit. You're a true son of the Fatherland. By the way," said the Nazi, "what is your occupation?"

"Me? Oh, I'm a grave digger."

Dick Ryden: "You should see the new altar in our church."

Katie Smith: Lead me to it."

The teacher was testing the knowledge of the kindergarten class. Slapping a half-dollar on the desk, she asked sharply. "What is that?"

Instantly a voice from the back row said. "Tails."

Lydie Warren (buying a feather for her hat at a notion counter): "Clerk, do you have feathers?"

Clerk: "No. do I look like a chicken?"

- Sept 2, 1941 Seniors take over school in a grand flurry. From this time on and speaking for the majority of us, our time was spent entirely on studies—except for such things as the Spree where Don Moeller was the flower of the ball with a huge white lily corsage and Q. Z. Sherman was the belle of the ball with a pretty white suit. Bob Hufford was named the dope of the senior party in an enticing uniform as was Clare Kessel another main attraction. Walt Orr made himself another general nuisance by keeping the hard times party in an aproar. These are only a few senior events, and so good-bye.

Hotel Clerk: "Are you a guest of the house?"

Patron: "Heck no I'm paying twenty dollars a day."

Miss Meers: "Use a sentence with the word beans' in it."

Elizabeth Erickson: "My father grows

Irl Irwin: "My mother cooks beans."
Bill Grothe: "We are all human beans."

"That's a dirty dig," said John Wyles as he finished washing his ears.

Robbie Evans was told to write a long sentence. After a little thought he wrote

"Life imprisonment."

Wally Ross: "What would you say to a girl who kisses every man she meets?"
Sammy Bierman: "Pleased to meet you."

"I hear your son left college because of poor eyesight."

STUDENT OF THE YEAR

Student of the year is Rodney Squenish 11, who is known to his father as "Junior."

Rodney, being color blind to red and blue, has no particular favorite color, but goes in a big way for anything that looks gray. A confirmed reformer, he hates graft and inefficiency in local government with all his stout heart. His favorite pastime is walking bare-footed through soft mud.

His hobbies are writing and reading. He writes lots of short funny stories and knocks himself out laughing at his jokes, but refuses even to look at another author's stuff. Of it he says, eyes flashing, "Huh!"

Slothfully adverse to all sorts of labor, Rodney is not at all ambitious; his only goal in life is to retire at twenty and go to bed.

-Bill Boylan.

"I feel quite put out about this," said the man as the usher ejected him from the theater.

Old Lody: "Isn't it wonderful how these filling station people know exactly where to set up pumps and get gas?"

Mouse Mallgren: "Where is your chivalty?"

Pat Cooper: "Me, oh I traded it in on a Butck!"

I was struck by the beauty of her hand, I tried to kiss her. As I said before-

I was struck by the beauty of her hand.

Patient: "Doctor, how are my chances?" Doctor: "Oh, pretty good, but I wouldn't start reading any continued stories."

Doctor (to patient in hospital): "Well, how did you get here?" Stanley Caplan: "Flu."

Minister: "Do you know where little boys go who fish on Sunday, my son?" Jack Foster: "Sure! Follow me and I'll show you."

- R ---

Woody: "Do you play on the piano?" Eddie Hunter: "No, my mother's atraid I'll fall off."

He tried to cross the railroad track Before a rushing train; They put the pieces in a sack, But they couldn't find the brain.

Audrey Ross: "What is it when you have your appendix removed?"

Polly Percival: "An appendectomy." Audrey: "What is it when you have your tonsils removed?"

Polly: "A tonsillectomy."

Audrey: "Then what is it when you have a growth removed from your head?" Polly: "I don't know."

Audrey: "A hair cut, you jerk."

"Well, I'll be switched," said the freight car as it went in on the siding.

Arch Madden (in English class): "I have a cold in my head." Miss Jacobs: "Well, that's something!"

Auctioneer: "How much am I offered for this horse?"

Bidder: "Seventy dollars."

Auctioneer: "I'm bid $70. Do I hear $75?"

Farmer: "Seventy five dollars." The horse fell dead.

THE THINKER'S THOUGHTS By Allen Brown

When gazing upon the famous statue, "The Thinker", that is sitting, and has been for years, in front of the Pantheon in Pans, one cannot help wondering what he could be thinking about all this time. It is quite apparent that he is suffering from a colossal hangover, so let us assume that our subject partook in a little over-indulgence the century before. Two questions then, may be preying upon his mind: (a) what did he have to drink? and (b) what is the reason for his odd attire?

Let us analyze each problem separately. One, since the only thing available in the days when our subject lived was Elderberry wine or something similar to it, let us assume that he is suffering from an overdose of Elderberry wine, which has perhaps (perhaps? there's no doubt about it) been subjected to a slight bit of spiking. This alone would probably be enough to cause, as the Latins would say "hangoverus serverus" as as we say, just plain "hangover".

Now for the other question; as most of the clothes that were (or were not) worn during the time our subject lived were of a scanty nature anyway, it's hard to tell if anything is missing. Let us go under the supposition that he had clothes before misfortune came his way. Now you can't tell me that all this bird did for one whole century was to sip Elderberry wine. The wine was probably served as a refreshment for some kind of a game, probably dominoes or something of that sort. The rest of it is simple then. Our friend's opponent "stacked" the dominoes, and this is why our friend is sitting, wondering, worrying, and of course, thinking about how terrible world conditions are, as many of us are thinking today.

Moral: Don't play dominoes with strangers, because you might find yourself sitting outside the Pantheon—and Nazi bombs aren't mosquito bites.

Bank Teller: "How much do you wish to deposit?"

Bev Peet: "Oh, I don't mean that kind of an account. I mean an account like I have at the stores."

Bob Pope: "My dad is an Elk, a Lion, a Moose and an Eagle."

Margaret Mitchell: "How much does it cost to see him?"

Question: "Do you find it pays to keep bees?"

Answer: "Yes and no. We don't need much money, but they have stung several collectors."

"Now lady," instructed the young lawyer, "tell me just where the prisoner was milking the cow."

The young lady smiled sweetly and said, "Why I think it was just a little back of the center."

Lives of students all remind us We must strive to do our best,

Jimmy Alexander (driving about sixty):
"No, but I've been slapped twice."

THE STORY OF A STARRY NIGHT

Jim, beneath The Light of the Silvery Moon, drove his Merry Oldsmobile Uptown Between Eighteenth and Nineteenth on Chestnut Street to Madelyn's house. Jim was Angry with her, but as she met him she teased, "Who's Sorry Now?" He was Sorry, of course, and now he confessed, "I Cried For You," which was a strange thing for a Ragtime Cowboy from Deep in the Heart of Texas to do.

Jim told her that Margie, Rosalie, Rose O'Day, Maria Elena, The Lady in Red, Tangerine, Genevieve, and Louise were all loves gone by and that he liked her Easter Bonnet, Green Eyes, and Modern Design.

"I Don't Want to Walk Without You Baby," he sighed. "You Started Me Dreaming and now I don't feel like The Morning After or have those Blues in the Night to haunt My Reverse."

"Oh Daddy," she said," since The Whispering Grass told You about it I won't even look at Hector the Garbage Collector or Stay Up Stan the Midnight Record Man."

I'm threw Smiles in his Playmate's direction, then asked, "Baby, how's about doing the Jersey Bounce or the Roosevelt Hop at The Woodchoppers' Ball at The Friendly Tavern? Alexander's Ragtime Band is one of The Things I Love and they play 'em Eight to the Bar."

So with Flowers for Madam, and Madelyn with her String of Pearls, they had Tea for Two and Blue Champagne at the Friendly Tavern, along with a Moonlight Cocktail.

HOW NOT TO BE A JUNE GRADUATE

- I. Start the semester off with a bang by swiping the home room treasurer's receipt book and filling one out for your senior dues. What's forgery when $3.25 is concerned?
- II. Now that you're a senior, you're better than any one else. Let every one know it by:
 - a. Ordering little tenth graders to carry your books, brush your teeth, and do your home work.
 - b. Skip school and then ask the teachers what they think they can do about it.
 - c. Tell your folks you're going out with the car and won't be back till late.
 - d. Give all your personal opinions in class. This includes telling the coach that you don't need to train—that you're the best man on the team anyway.
- III. Borrow cars from the parking lot without asking the owners.
- IV. Use your great-uncle's senior theme,
 "What Is This New-Fangled Thing
 the Railroad?" for your theme for Miss Jacobs. For your theme in history, write a treatise on communism, copying exactly from Karl Marx's third volume.
- V. Be the life of every senior party. This is done by starting the table cloths on fire; carrying a mouse in your pocket and waving it after every course; bringing your own rock candy (peanut-brittle or on that order) and munch quietly while the toastmaster is speaking; slipping hot chocolate down your neighbors necks; and placing banana tickets at intervals around the dance floor.
- VI. In class, indulge in those three for 15 candy bars. Don't let the teachers get near you. (They want a bite.)
- VII. Organize a senior skip day. (Are we ever sorry we started it!)
- VIII. Be perfectly frank with the faculty as to what you think about them.

Follow this plan and we'll guarantee you'll be graduated in June.

(June 1987.)

Pathetically yours, Harlan Wittenstein and Clare Kessel

MACBETH

A Condensation by Allen Brown

Shakespeare's nasty habit of getting his caste into trouble and almost always leaving them there is evidenced in Macbeth, the story of a jerkish individual, with kilts attached, who was made the fall-guy by a bunch of witches.

In the first act we find a few ghosts having a little bull session at the local grave yard one dreary evening. One of them, Greymaikin by name, seems to be the only one that knows how often the street cars run. She chats amicably with her chums during the first scene, exchanging with them various little hints on the art of ghosting, (household haunts to you), but soon she gets down to brass tacks. The brass being one Macbeth—army officer de-luxe; the tacks being the throne of Scotland and how to get the same the easy, Greymalkin way, in ten easy lessons. The ghosts want Macbeth to get the throne, by fair means or foul and as we leave it looks as though it's going to be foul.

Macbeth and his right hand man, Banquo, both of whom are stooges to Duncan. king of Scotland, are homeward bound after a brawl of some sort in the north. Our two friends smash up the graveyard tea party and receive the prophecy that Macbeth will be king of Scotland in nothing flat if he gets to know the right people Greymalkin also tells Mac (it's Mac for short from here on out), to watch out for a certain somebody whose name we didn't get.

Well, Mac carries the good news home to Lady Macbeth, who evidently has her own ideas about getting the crown and who wastes no time in putting them into effect. She reasoned that there could be only one king per throne, (smart girl), and that as Scotland already had one king, said king would have to be removed in order that hubby could step into the driver's seat.

Her homicidal urge proves contagious and as a result we find in a middle act somewhere a peaceful family scene: Papa Macbeth by the fireplace, sharpening up his meat cleaver, and Mama Macbeth putting the finishing touches on their newly composed murder list.

Their "Who's Who" numbers six, and the main idea is to see who can run up the biggest score in bump-offs in the least amount of time. During this course of coarse action, the Mrs., who resembles more than slightly "Mazie the Ax Murderess" of pulp magazine fame, tries valiantly to make a name for herself in the murder racket, but after all, the woman's place is in the home, so hubby, having more social contacts than his spouse, manages to make the death score lopsided in his favor.

To all inquirers, Mac says that his victums caught pneumonia, or something on that order which sounded rather hollow to several of the deceased's relatives, who catch the local express out of town so they won't be next. Some of them get to their destination; others catch "pneumonia", (making the score 6 to 0 in favor of Mac) and still others just dropped out of the story—I don't know why—I wasn't watching them closely.

Well, with "Murder Inc.," being the little woman's idea, she was a little put out at having her spouse crab her act by doing a better job on the clean-up campaign than she. It was her idea in the first place, and she didn't even get to lop one head off, so we can't blame her for being a little bit peeved, now can we? She checks out by going insane and with Macheth's friends all suddenly dying of "pneumonia" coupled with his wife going around minus brains, soon puts Mac in the market for a straight jacket.

When things are nearing the end, but are still pretty much up in the air, in pops the bird whose name we didn't get in the first act or so. He cleans house on Mac and the story ends in pretty much the way that it started . . . that is, with every one, including the audience knowing no more and maybe a little less than when we started.

Moral: Always get the other guys name the first time—the second time he may have a loaded sling-shot with him.

Mistress: Did you give the goldfish fresh water?"

Oh pal of mine, li'l porcupine, If 'tweren't for you I wouldn't mind The roar of traffic in the street Or hamburgers, hot dogs, or other meat.

But when I relax and think of you And the times we used to knew, I ask myself with wonderment, "Say, who was that little runt?"

Though your feet were too big
And your ancestor a pig.
I can't understand where
You got that sharp, messy, long hair.
From a bear?
Or perhaps from a wayward prickly pear hmmmmmm?

Those quills, which to me are a mystery, Will undoubtedly go down in history
As a positive throwback to the dinosaur
Or a carpeted floor,

You're not the type for a household pet
At least, not yet!
(I wouldn't pet you on a bet)
Your manners are indelicate—
And you need a darn good haircut!
Or don't you—hmmmmmm?

INTERNATIONAL STREETCAR RIDE

By Allen Brown

The streetcar in which we are riding screeches to a stop. The doors open and with a few brisk steps, a short, substantial-looking man, wearing horn-rimmed glasses and smoking a big cigar, climbs aboard and seats himself in the front of the car. From his seat he watches a mother and her large family of small children board and pay their fair, after which they sit down.

The conductor closes the door, starts the car, and we are once more on our way. At the next stop we see three men waiting to board. The first, who has a collection of paints and brushes, seems to be the leader. He has a little square mustache and a lock of hair which is combed parallel to his eyebrows. The second man has bronzed skin, (a feature which is probably due to an overexposure of balcony sunlight), a jaw which is jutting into the clouds, and he is wearing the prettiest uniform that you ever did see. The third has iron grey hair and rough skin, and a mustache like one that you would expect to see in a "Gay Nineties Review".

The first man slugs the conductor and tries to get on without paying his fare. As all the seats are taken, he shoves the lady and all her kids into the aisle. This enrages the stout gentleman with the cigar and the glasses, and he promptly rushes to the old gal's aid.

About the time things are getting warmed up, the two men who had waited for the ride with our artist friend, get on the car and plow toward a seat. The first pugalist says.

"Oh, no, you don't! You're in this as much as I am."

To which the stooge replies, "Oh, sorry chief. I didn't know that you needed me —yea chief, anything you say chief."

And with these words he starts slugging the little kids who are already out cold on the aisle. But the other man, who is strangely reminiscent of a certain communist we know, suddenly remembers that our artist friend once used loaded dice in a crap game—and so remembering, he joins the fight on the side of the stout gentleman with the cigar and glasses.

The conductor picks himself up off the floor and starts the car. All the while, a little oriental fellow has been watching the goings-on. He soon spies a middle aged man, apparently a cripple, because he has a cane, who is asleep a few seats in front of him. The slumbering one also has a rather large jaw, and a long cigaret holder dangles from his lips. The oriental pulls out a sling-shot and aims a rock at the sleeping form. The rock finds it's mark and rudely awakens the man, who turns around and slugs the oriental with his cane.

When the car pulls into another station, the gentleman who is caning the slant-eyed one, recognizes a few of his friends whose apartment building is near his. He talks them into getting on the car and joining the fight on his side.

SMART!

An elderly professor was riding on a train one day. He had a long trip ahead of him and wanted to find some way to pass the time. Finally he struck up a conversation with a farmer sitting next to him. The professor suggested that they play a quiz game and the farmer was agreeable. Since the professor was undoubtedly much smarter than his new friend, the two agreed to give the farmer two to one odds and place a bet on the answers. The farmer was to ask the first question and receive a dollar if his opponent could not answer.

"What animal has six legs and can fly

as well as walk?"

"I don't know," said the professor, handing him a dollar. "What's the answer?"

"I don't know, either," said the farmer, as he handed him back a fifty-cent piece.

He answered that he couldn't get the nails pounded in. The other moron said, "Well you dummy, don't you know that those nails go in on the other side of the house?"

LIVE AND LEARN

And then there was the story of the young man who was riding down an exceptionally dark street of an unknown town. Coming to a fork in the road, he observed a post with a sign on the top. Not knowing which way to turn, he jumped off his bicycle and went to the foot of the post to see what the sign said. It was too dark to see the top of the post, so he climbed up to see what the words were, and was amazed to read in large red letters, "Wet Paint."

Jim Grove (after much urging): "Well, all right, since you insist—what shall I play?"

Bill Boylan: "Anything you like. It's only to annoy the neighbors."

Mr. Munger: "Bill, do you know the difference between a cow's tail and a pump handle."

Bill Greeman: "No."

Mr. Munger: "I'd hate to send you out for water."

Marjorie Van Hoesen: "What shall we do?"

Jann Blish: "I'll spin a coin, if it's heads we'll play tennis if it's tails we'll go to a movie, and if it stands on end, we'll study."

Mr. Irwin (in class): "Will someone please open a window? Not too wide—it isn't good to sleep in a draft."

Life is like a deck of cards,
Hearts when you're in love,
Diamonds when you're engaged,
Clubs when you're married and
Spades when you're dead.

Harry Covey 'He cleaned up a big fortune in crooked dough."

Betty Kernahan "He was a counterfeiter?"

Harry: "No, a pretzel manufacturer."

OH COME NOW!

Dave Lambert: "When I was on the Olympic diving team I dived off a 300-foot board into a foot of water."

Jimmy Coffman: "That's nothing—when I was on the Olympic diving team, I dived off a 500-foot tower into a damp rag."

Mr. Irwin: "The gas in this cylinder is deadly poison. What steps would you take if any escaped?"

Ray Eastman: "Long ones."

Mr. Battrick was deep in his reading when his wife called: "Heavens! Baby has swallowed the ink! What shall I do?"

"Write with a pencil," was his reply.

Bill Dixson: "I s'pose you hatch these chickens yourself?"

Harlan Heater: "Nope, we keep hens to look after them small details."

Les Brooks (writing a poem): "The night wore on."

Huff: "What'd it wear?"

Les: "The close of the day—you dummy."

Coach Rump says: "Throw open the window and throw out your chest."

Mr. Eastman: "What is the greatest contribution to science that chemistry has made?"

Dale Porter: "Blondes."

Mary Jean Carr: "Did you see the big fight in the street car?"

Phyllis Buckman: "No. What happened?"
Mary Jean: "The conductor punched a transfer."

Dick Sherman was speaking for the first time in public and began in this style.

"Ladies and g-g-gentlemen: When I-I-I came her tonight only t-t-two people knew my speech, my m m mother and m-m-my-self. N-n-now only m-m-mother knows it!"

Visiting Relative: Do you study diligently."

Chuck Bare "Naw, there am't no such course."
